Notes:-

1. H.N.O.B. Historical notes on our Borough. From research, local knowledge, maps and directories.

2. Manor ways :- There are several roads in the district which are called 'Manor ways'. All but one of them are on the marshes; the exception, Parsonage Manorway, seems to have got its name comparatively recently and may not have or need the same explanation as the rest. The Manor ways on the marshes were access roads to fields held in different ownerships. Many of the local big estates such as Danson, Hall Place, Mount Mascall, May Place, Lamorbey (Halfway St.), besides the Manor of Erith itself, had pieces of land in the marshes, and needed roads by which to reach them. There is a reference to the construction of such roads in an old document in the archives (G 178); this is an agreement between several landowners and an engineer in the year 1622 by which the engineer undertook to recover 580 acres of flooded marshland in Erith and to construct "ways and passages for those who shall be owners or occupiers of the said inlined lands". Another document (G 49, 1761) states that the landowners also owned the Manor ways so that they were in no sense public rights of way. These access roads were sometimes called 'Manor ways', sometimes 'manways' and sometimes 'mainways'. There is no known explanation of the term, but it is clear that the manor ways on Erith marshes did not belong to the old Manor of Erith.

3. Synonyms for 'street'. The distinction between 'Street', 'Road', 'Avenue', 'Terrace', 'Lane' etc. has merged over the years but they each once had a precise meaning. To the Romans some thoroughfare constructed with layers of rock and rubble was a 'via strata', (paved way) giving us the word street. The word outlived its original meaning and took on its present one of a way lined with houses. Road, on the other hand is derived from the verb 'to ride'. It indicated a highway used by travellers on horseback. Lane has generally managed to keep its ancient meaning of a narrow or winding path. In the suburbs, Lane usually indicates a genuine pre-urban track. Hill originally referred only to the piece of raised ground and not to the road over it. Nowadays it can simply mean 'road built on a slope' **

4. A commemorative name. Many street names reflect the 'Good Times' in English history, i.e. Victories, alliances, Royal marriages and achievements. A favourite topical subject was Royalty, commemorating births, deaths and marriages. George IV's brothers, York, Clarence, Kent, Cumberland, Sussex and Cambridge were all popular with c19th builders. Less popular than Royals were the names commemorating 'Great Men', 'Events' or 'Mythology'. I.e. Hengist, Horsa, Gordon, Havelock, Wellington, Maida, Lancelot, & Merlin
